Greetings!

Welcome to the 2017 edition of Sutton's Iris Garden catalog, our 35th. Once again this year we are both honored and excited to be introducing new iris from world renowned hybridizer Anton Mego! Anton's 5 introductions this year are truly amazing. Striking colors, form and patterns incorporated in to high quality iris hybrids. Order early as there is already much demand. Sutton's Legacy Collection is again on the back cover. This collection is an honoring and remembrance of George Sutton's dedication and work in the field of bearded iris. Each year some of his many introduced varieties will be offered in this collection at a discounted price.

Idaho continues to be an adventure with clean air and an awesome climate. We will continue to develop our new property, creating display beds and adding structures, as well as pursuing more acreage for future growth.

Our rebloom program is moving forward nicely with many, many seedlings reblooming this past summer and fall. Several have exhibited multiple rebloom and a few are ever-bloomers from frost to frost. We anticipate many cooler climate rebloom introductions in the near future. Thank you to our loyal customers; you are greatly appreciated. Welcome to those of you who are receiving this catalog for the first time!

How To Grow Iris

Bearded iris are about the easiest of garden plants to grow and will give good results with a minimum of care, but like all plants, the better you care for them the better they perform. The following instructions are easy to follow and should lead to awesome iris blooms year after year.

WHEN TO PLANT

Bearded iris should be planted in July, August or September. It's important that the roots get established before the end of your growing season. Plant your iris at least six (6) weeks before your first frost.

LOCATION

Bearded iris like the sun! A half day of sun will be fine for most areas but a full day of sun is best. Make sure to provide the iris with good drainage. Raised beds or slope plantings are ideal places to plant iris.

SOIL PREPARATION

Bearded iris do great in most well drained garden soils. If you have heavy soil, adding humus, coarse sand or rice hulls will help. Creating raised beds is the easiest way to make sure they have proper drainage.

PLANTING DEPTH

Your iris should be planted so the tops of the rhizomes are slightly exposed and the roots are spread out facing downwards in the soil. In very hot climates, covering the rhizome with about an inch of soil is advisable. Pack the soil firmly around the rhizome and water in. A common mistake is planting the iris too deep. Make sure that you do not have any soil covering the green part of the fans (leaves).

CULTURE

Newly planted iris need moisture to encourage root growth; however, over-watering can cause rot. After the new iris have been planted, water immediately. Deep watering at long intervals is better than more frequent shallow waterings. Once established, iris normally don't need to be watered except in arid areas. Over-watering is a common error and can lead to disease. Reblooming iris need a touch more water than spring only bloomers. If reblooming iris do not receive moisture over a three (3) week period during the summer, they may not bloom in fall. Specific fertilizer recommendations depend on your soil type. A 5-10-10 application is recommended about six (6) weeks before spring bloom and after fall planting. Reblooming iris should have an additional application of fertilizer immediately after the completion of spring bloom. Avoid high nitrogen fertilizers. Alfalfa pellets are extremely beneficial when incorporated into the soil around newly planted iris.

Reblooming iris require a little more attention than spring only bloomers but with the right care and conditions can provide wonderful bloom in summer and fall. As with spring only bloomers, a pre-bloom application of low nitrogen fertilizer will optimize spring bloom. However to encourage summer and fall rebloom, fertilize again shortly after the conclusion of spring bloom (usually about two weeks after) with a 5-10-10 application of fertilizer. In addition, rebloomers will require a bit more water than their spring only cousins. Water every two weeks in summer unless a rainfall of over 1/4" has occurred. All iris perform best when they are planted in areas with excellent drainage, they need water but not swampy conditions. Planting all iris in four inch high raised of sandy loam is their ideal home.

Most iris need to be dug and separated every three to four years to keep them healthy and blooming well. It is not necessary for their survival but it will help keep them looking and blooming great. Rebloomers typically are more vigorous growers and should be dug, separated and replanted every three years.

With just a little extra care and attention, reblooming iris can give you two or more bloom cycles per year depending on growing conditions. A little more effort but much more reward!
