Hi

This year has been a year of big changes for us. Many of you who come to our gardens may remember Carol (and older English lady) who helped us for several years. Unfortunately Carol died this autumn after a short illness, however she will be remembered with an iris "Carol E", please see the new releases. Also, Colleen has resigned from her sales job to work full-time in the gardens, whereas Les will be working as a driver part-time. We hope that we will be able to provide improved service to our customers, this way.

Quarantine regulations for both Western Australia and Tasmania have become stricter and require more work however we will continue shipping to these states, however our postage cost have had to increase.

LES and COLLEEN MODRA

WHAT IRISES CAN I GROW?

If you've ever been confused by gardening articles that say irises like wet soil, dry soil, acid soil, alkaline soil etc, join the club. The fact is, all of the above statements are true to some extent. There is an iris for almost any soil or climate; it's just a matter of selecting the right one for your situation. Please buy a pH test kit at your local hardware store or nursery, it will really help you understand your soil.

Warm, dry winters, wet summers

Louisiana's are your best bet, if your soil is alkaline, prepare a special place and add acid potting mix and/or sulphur.

Cool wet-dry winters, wet summers, acid soil

Louisiana's and Japanese will do well. Also Tall Bearded and Spurias. Make sure your Tall Bearded are very well drained and there is no moist mulch over the rhizomes. Try Pacific Coast's in well-mulched soil with good summer drainage and good winter moisture. If you have frosts, Sibericas will do well also, keep moist till after flowering. Try Evansia irises in a fairly shady spot.

Cool wet-dry winters, wet summers, alkaline soils -

Tall bearded and Spurias in well drained soil. Try Louisianas and Japanese in pots of camellia potting mix, sitting in shallow water. If you get winter frosts, try Sibericas, Dwarfs and Medians as well.

Cold wet winters, dry summers, alkaline soils.

This is where Tall Bearded and Spurias thrive, and Dwarfs and Medians, especially if you have good winter frosts. Although many books say bearded irises grow well up to a pH of 7.5, many iris growers here in South Australia grow them very successfully at pHs of about 9 (very alkaline). If you want to grow Louisiana's and Pacific Coast irises, use pots with acid potting mix. Put the Louisiana's and Japanese in pots of camelia potting mix in shallow water, such as a paddling pool, also, check that your water is not too alkaline.

Cold winters, wet winters, dry summers, acid soils – Pacific Coasts, Louisiana's and Spurias will do well but you must mulch your Louisiana's well and keep them watered well in summer. Siberica and Japanese Iris will grow if well mulched and watered through summer. Dwarf, Median and Tall Bearded, are all good also, but may need a little lime. Try Evansia irises in a fairly shady spot.

DAYLILIES

These will grow in almost any climate. Dormant varieties tend to do better in frosty areas and evergreens in warmer areas. In areas of very low humidity a few varieties may not open their flowers properly. In sandy soils incorporate a lot of organic matter into your soil. Daylilies are drought tolerant but do much better if well fed with organic fertilizer and are well mulched.

LANDSCAPING WITH IRISES AND DAYLILIES

Rock Gardens - Shorter small flowered Daylilies with their finer foliage look lovely in rock gardens, as do dwarf and median irises (in frosty areas). If the garden is well drained and hardly watered, the Aril Bred irises are a good choice. In moister rock gardens try Pacific Coast Iris if you have acid soil.

Lightly Shaded Spots – This is where you can grow Iris Ungularis (which will flower through winter) and Daylilies.

Sunny but Damp Spots – This is heaven for Louisianas, Japanese and Daylilies, and some species iris. In cold climates the Siberian Irises, also.

Hot Dry Spots – This is where Bearded Irises thrive (the Aril-Breds will be especially happy). They look great when mixed with roses, and lavenders, etc. Take care to ensure that no mulch covers the rhizomes of the irises as this may inhibit flowering and induce rot. Spuria Irises, being taller, look great in the centre of the garden. If there are some spots which get a bit more water you can mix in some Daylilies, ensuring they are well mulched.

The Tropical Look - Daylilies with their hot colours and bright green strappy foliage really add to the scene, plus they will flower for long periods, whether in full sun or light shade. Louisianas will look good in a damp sunny spot.

The Pond – Daylilies look great around the edge of the pond. If your soil is acid, the Louisianas and Japanese will thrive right at the edge. If your soil is not very acid, put your Louisianas and Japanese in pots of acid potting mix and half immerse in the pond. Further out from the edge you can plant Spurias and Bearded Iris if the top of the soil is not damp all year round. Also Pacific Coast Irises, look nice around the front (in acid soils). Sibericas look good in a damp area in cold climates.

Cottage Garden – This is where Tall Bearded Irises can really add to the look. Lots of roses, perennials and masses of irises for the "Monet" look. Just make sure that the mulch and ground covers don't shade the rhizomes. In cold climates some Medians and Dwarfs Irises can be added at the front of the garden. If you maintain adequate summer moisture, your reblooming irises will often flower twice a year, once established.

Naturalizing – Spuria Irises naturalize well. They will die down in summer after flowering and come away with the winter rains. Many bearded irises also do well without summer moisture, especially Aril Breds (which will die down in summer).

Coastal gardens – remember that beach front areas often don't get as much winter chilling as a kilometre or two inland. Thus in areas such as Sydney and Perth (and right on the beach front in Adelaide) tall bearded irises may not always flower. Spurias may do well, Daylilies and Louisianas (acid soil) will thrive, if there's plenty of organic matter. and moisture.

NEW RELEASESPACIFIC COASTCHARLESTON SMOKE (Modra 06) ML 18cm $14

A low growing one which has a tendency to have second flush of flowers in Nov-Dec. Stds of smokey lavender lilac, with darker veining at base. Style arms cream edged lavender. Falls lilac lavender, lighter around darker purple signal.

TALL BEARDEDBREAKING THE RULES (Modra 06) M 86cm $50

This does break all the rules. Huge blooms of creamy white deepening to yellow at the edges. The very open stds show off the yellow style arms and large fuzzy orange beards. The beards have a small purple end and then open up into huge yellow flounces. Bud count 6-8, pod fertile. (It's Magic x Momentous Occasion)

CAROL E (Modra 06) EM 92cm $22

Named for our very dear friend Carol, who used to help us in the gardens. She said her ideal iris was a very ruffled rich violet blue, which this certainly is. But best of all this one of the best fragranced irises we've ever grown. Nice branching, good growth, potential for rebloom on alkaline soils as both its parent's rebloom. Fertile both ways. (Deja Blue x Autumn Thunder)

SILVER WALTZ (Modra 07) VE_E 97cm $20

Lovely pastel silver blue with standout yellow beards. Very long bloom season. Garden visitors have walked out of the way to check out this one growing at the top of a bank. Also facing due west almost no stems have been blown over. Clean growth, 7-8 buds. An excellent garden iris.

LOUISIANAFIRST LIME (Betts 07) E 109cm $10

Soft yellow-green with green signal and veining. Sweet fragrance. (reg 2000)

TALL BEARDED IRISES

These stunning plants like neutral to alkaline well-drained soils in full sun, cool to cold winters and hot summers. They are extremely hardy and require only light watering throughout summer. They appreciate a good slow release fertilizer or organic fertilizer (in winter and when replanting), but do not place water-holding mulch directly on top of the rhizomes or they may rot.

They are best divided soon after flowering (Nov-Dec) or late summer (Mar-May), but they will survive being moved almost any time. However, if you must move them in Jan-Feb, be careful not to over water and induce rot.

These are highly floriferous and form delightful flower carpets. They are easy to grow but do require full sun and frosty winters and loose well-drained soil. Do not allow to dry out totally, over summer.

SPURIA IRISES

Spurias are tall growers with a flower similar to Dutch Irises but flowering from late October through November. They like most soils. If unwatered through summer they will die down and happily come away in winter, or if lightly watered throughout summer they will stay green. They are excellent for naturalizing and are virtually carefree but don't like being moved and may not flower the first year after being moved. Do not allow to dry completely out in spring. Available January to June only.

NOT RECOMMENDED FOR POT CULTURE.

USEFUL WEB AND E-MAIL LINKS

OUR SITE www.impressiveirises.com.au

AMERICAN IRIS SOCIETY – <http://www.irises.org/>

This site has much information, recent awards lists, links to many commercial growers (mostly American), most of whom have iris photos on their sites. It also links to growing information and the iris register. (The iris register contains almost all irises ever registered. There is an annual fee of $US10 for access.)

It also contains links to many other specialist iris groups, e.g. historic, Louisiana etc.

A particularly good site if you want to know more about aril and aril-breds is <http://www.geocities.com/~smcallister/>

There are a number of iris e-mail lists (these are where you just down-load e-mails and reply if you wish, as opposed to on-line chat).

The two main general iris lists are:-

Iris-talk (no attachments allowed, for those worried about viruses) to subscribe send an e-mail to majordomo@hort.net as the message, write "subscribe iris".

Iris-photos, (attachments allowed). <http://groups.yahoo.com/group/iris-photos>

These are very busy posting sites and some people don't want to receive this quantity of e-mail every day. You can just search for information posted on these lists by using the Mallorn archives.

DAYLILIES

One of the easiest plants to grow, daylilies will grow in almost any climate in Australia. However the dormant varieties tend to do better in the cooler areas and some evergreens may prefer a warmer climate. Our stock is all grown in a climate similar to Melbourne's. They need little maintenance but prefer moderate fertilizing and water to perform at their best. They are great for holding soil on banks and when established are quite drought tolerant. The modern daylilies provide wonderful clumps of colour without becoming invasive as some older varieties do. Many rebloom having two to four flushes of flowers in a season, with the first flush starting in about October. Whilst each individual bloom lasts only one day, each flower stem (scape) has up to 35 buds and each clump may have many scapes, thus giving a very long and showy display. Originally daylilies had only one pair of chromosomes (Diploid) but some were then bred with a double set of chromosomes (Tetraploid) to give improved substance. However many of the newer diploids are as good, if not better, than some tetraploids. If you are interested in hybridizing you cannot cross diploids with tetraploids. This year we've included registered bloom size in the description. Descriptions read Bloom Season (E, M, L) Habit (Ev SEv Dor) Ploidy (dip, Tet) Rebloom, Plant flowering Height in cm, Bloom Size in cm.

NAME CHANGES Please note that a number of Salter bred daylilies had their names changed after release and were later given an extra name to meet full registration acceptance. We use the official registration name not the original release name eg Mandalay Bay Music not Mandalay Bay.
